

COMMENT: Why Britain handled its banks badly too

Newsround: what Friday's business pages say

Top Tips for the Weekend

SUNDAY SERVICE*
How to access newspaper stories and archives

Megazyme wins National Small Business Award

06:14, 8 March 2013 by Post Reporter

Wicklow-based biotechnology firm Megazyme International Ireland has won the overall SFA National Small Business Award 2013.

Based in Bray, the company employs 34 people.

It is involved in the development and supply of analytical test kits and reagents for the agricultural, food, wine, dairy and biotechnology industries.

Category award winners included Moll Industries (manufacturing), Celtic Pure Services (food and drink), McGee Pharma (services), Celtic Rider (outstanding small business) and M&T Plant Hire (environmental sustainability).

This is the ninth year of the SFA National Small Business Awards, which are organised by the Small Firms Association.